Memory: Image: Trees: Song

For string quartet

James Wishart

The quartet's title makes reference to the importance of memory as a trigger for the (sometimes embroidered) reminiscences of particular events in the composer's past.

The common feature is that of trees – there are three 'tree memories' – firstly, a memory of the jacaranda trees across the city of Sydney bursting into vivid blossom in the Australian spring (November 1985), secondly, the flowing of branches of the banyan tree in the Bogor botanical gardens in Java (December 1985) and finally, a strange picture of a solitary Oak tree in the middle of a Warwickshire field at harvest-time with enormously strong colour contrasts – golden field of corn with a totally black stormy sky (Autumn 1990).

These images, each of which touch off a broader picture – of abundant and profound colour; of efflorescence; of stark contrast – are twinned in a non-programmatic way with three basic kinds of musical material which are unfolded separately and then intermingled.

Once the musical material was formed, musical considerations took over and governed the way in which the piece is constructed. It might nonetheless be seen as homage to the power (sometimes the distorting power) of memory to leave vivid images hovering in our minds, often for years at a time?

The musical score consists of four staves. The first staff (Violin I) features a melodic line with a descending microtonal glissando, marked with a triplet of notes and a dynamic of mp. The second staff (Violin II) mirrors this with a similar glissando and triplet, also marked mp. The third staff (Viola) provides harmonic support with a melodic line, marked p. The fourth staff (Cello/Double Bass) features a rhythmic accompaniment, marked mp. Performance instructions include pizz. (pizzicato), arco (arco), and poco rubato, molto espress. (poco rubato, molto espressivo). Dynamics range from p (piano) to mf (mezzo-forte). The score includes time signature changes from 3/4 to 2/4 to 5/4 to 4/4.
